The climate crisis is a human rights crisis – and a women's rights crisis.”

*Antonio Guterres
UN Secretary-General*

What is Climate Justice?

- Climate justice puts gender equality and human rights at the heart of any decisions about climate change
- Climate change threatens our human rights to
 - a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment
 - access to food, water, education, livelihoods and safety

Gender Equality + Climate action = Climate Justice to protect human rights

Example

- Girls walk miles to collect drinking water
- Water source dries up (drought)
- They walk further for water – no time for school, and vulnerable to attack

Climate Justice solution has two parts:

- Climate action policy – protects water system
- Gender-equal policy – ensures women and girls can access water as safely as men

The Train

Increased
carbon pollution

Causes global heating and extreme weather events

Triggering social disruption

Magnifying gender inequality

Stops the train by taking climate action (Paris Agreement) and closing the gender gaps in decision-making, education, economic opportunity, disaster preparedness, health and safety

Zonta Says NOW seeks climate justice for women and girls

So women and girls can prevent, prepare for, respond to and recover from the impacts of climate change on the same basis as men

We Engage with the Head, Heart and Hands

- Head: This involves strategic thinking, decision-making, and intellectual engagement.
- Heart: This focuses on emotional intelligence, empathy, and the ability to connect on a personal level.
- Hands: This pertains to practical implementation, action, and empowering others.

How to Take Action

zonta.org/zontasaysnow

APPLY THE FRAMEWORK FOR ACTION - 1

We can use the five-step Zonta Says NOW Framework to guide our climate justice actions.

1. Gather the Facts

Individually, we can:

- Increase our awareness of climate change and its gender-related consequences by reading books, watching videos, reading articles and listening to podcasts from reputable sources.
- Register for the Intercontinental Zonta Says NOW Think Tanks.
- Attend area workshops, district conferences and international conventions.
- Learn more about our countries' commitments to the Paris Agreement and Sustainable Development Goals.

2. Lead by example

Individually, we can:

- Reduce our personal greenhouse gas emissions with the United Nation's ten simple actions.
- Set our own sustainability challenges e.g. eating and purchasing more sustainably, walking and using public transport more often.
- Support environmentally-sustainable businesses with our purchases and investments.
- Develop our household emergency preparedness plan.

3. Use our voice

Individually, and as a club, we can raise awareness locally about climate change and its gender-related consequences by:

- Developing climate/gender equality elevator speeches or lists of key facts as conversation starters to use with family, co-workers and friends—and practise saying them.
- Joining local environmental, climate justice, and emergency management organizations to learn more about what is happening locally and raise awareness of climate justice issues.
- Engage with elected officials at all levels of government to raise awareness of climate justice issues and discuss solutions.

APPLY THE FRAMEWORK FOR ACTION - 2

Use the Framework to plan your activities.

4. Advocate

Through our club advocacy committees, we can:

- Contact community representatives, elected officials, local governments, and local NGOs to learn about local sustainability initiatives and whether the needs of women have been considered (or not) in the development of climate change response and disaster management plans.
- Demand and support the equal involvement of women and men in national and local decisions regarding environmental sustainability and disaster risk management.
- Demand and promote girls' education and the inclusion of climate literacy in schools, as well as the education of girls and women in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) to increase the scientific and technical contribution of women to climate protection.
- Advocate for national climate policies that take into account women's economic opportunities and ensure their full and equal economic participation.

5. Collaborate

With the advocacy teams in our clubs, areas, districts, and national bodies, we can:

- Work with other Zonta clubs, Golden Z clubs, Z clubs, and Supporting Members to magnify our voice in the community, educate on climate change, and raise awareness of local issues to achieve gender-equal climate justice.
- Work smarter, not harder, by collaborating with like-minded organisations, for example, UN Women, Soroptimists International, 1 Million Women, local branches of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, Plastic Free July, etc.
- Find out who is working for gender-equal climate justice in our area, see if our goals align and work with them.

Connecting and Communicating from the heart

Key molecules of life: We share more than we think.

DNA is the building block of life; human DNA is the same except for a small amount.

What makes us different is not only the 0.1% of our physical selves.

Our differences lie in our traditions, religions, cultures, languages, experiences, self-identities, abilities, and geographic location.

Ask yourself...
Can we connect and communicate to achieve gender equality?

World Wood Web: It is all about connection and communication

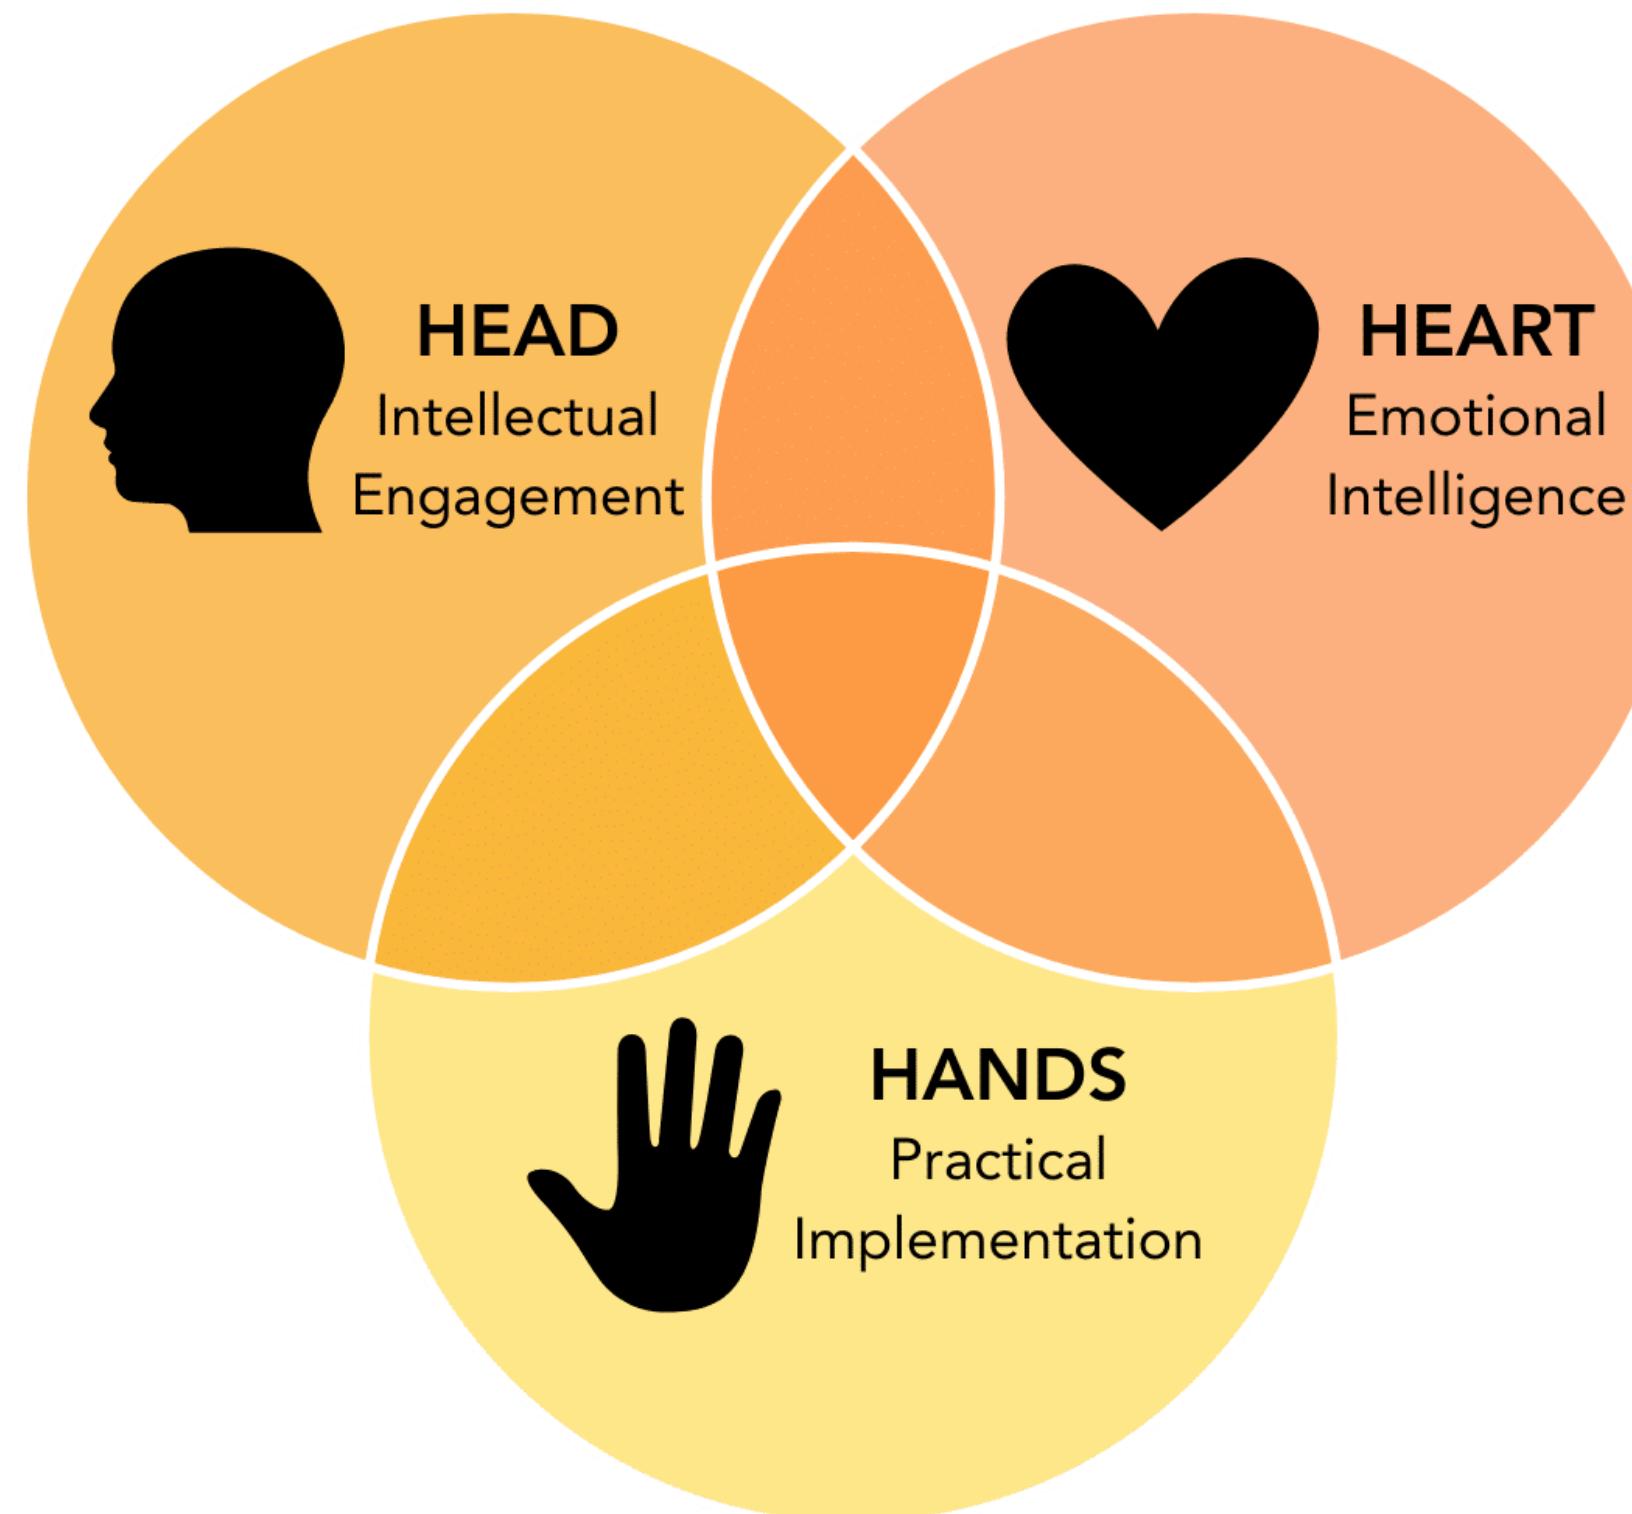

When we connect and communicate, we have a stronger message.

Advocacy...building awareness of an issue, using our voice to talk about an issue, examining issues to make improvements, and at times fighting for our rights... is a necessary task we all can support.

We can be like the fungi and tree roots that communicate in their forest community to protect future generations.

Connect with the heart, head, then hands

A conversation presupposes the assumption that the other person might be right.

Hans-Georg Gadamer

- Advocacy starts with the heart, travels to the head, then action comes from the hands.
- When we truly listen, accept and show up authentically, we create space for change.
